On The Road To Emmanus

Two of the disciples were walking along the road to Emmaus discussing about the tragic event of the past few days. They were joined by a third man, a stranger who asked them the nature of their talk.

And as they told the stranger of Christ crucified, they confessed their doubt or lack of significance.

And the unknown stranger explained these things in detail and his listeners impressed by the words of the stranger asked him to remain with them for the evening meal.

And as they ate with this mysterious one their eyes were suddenly opened to recognition of the Master. They knew Him—the Christ dead at that moment His disciples thought.

Whether the business girl should or should not be she should at least be in a position, and able to carry her weekly wage. Unfortunately, conditions in the city have been such that many girls within the last few weeks have found themselves in the ranks of the unemployed. Miss Beatrice Bigden, who has made a study of labor problems for many years, comes to Edmonton in the course of a tour of western cities, saying that the matter has reached an acute stage, and requires investigation. In Winnipeg a registry was opened, and 200 girls stood daily as being out of work. In Calgary conditions have been found to be bad. In Edmonton little has as yet been done officially, although a number of club women are working quietly to gather some idea of prevailing conditions.

On the beach I collected some small marine animals, including Myxostoma. I was looking for coral, but I found no coral and I think that I collected the wrong marine sea and not quite what I was looking for. For the identification, and I was told that the coral was in the water. I found one small sea slug, a small Polysiphonia, and then I found a big sea slug of water. . . . Although Polysiphonia and other things along the beach are interesting.

BUT there is one bugaboo of the 1980s that is not a byproduct of the new technology, and that is the problem of the "black box" or "data dump." Then Speedy had to get down and smack it lustily with the broom.

Men Respond to Challenge

BLAIRS, legends, frost and blizzard, it is doubtful that the crew that went out to clear the road got a crew to man a snow plow if it weren't for him. Human nature is a peculiar thing and sometimes needs of understanding is imposed on the part of those who, for any reason, are forced to do it by their will. One night on a certain terminal the roadmaster advised the dispatcher that it would be necessary to run the snow plow out into the river to keep the traffic flowing. This was unusual, no difficulty in clearing that area, but when it came to manning the engine, the management were up against it.

In the morning of the 13th I took a car and drove down, but all of these men assigned me. I had just completed a day's work and was on my way for their regular run at 10:30 a. m. At 10:00 a. m. I was told to wait at the platform and quietly an ear to be loaded with lumber for the presentation of looking rest of the day. In short, they were exempt from the usual work of the following morning.

He hurried away to the bunkhouse. The wind whistled and whirled, and gusts of snow and ice drift announced his entry. He stood for a moment, looking at the swirling snow, and then he hurried on. Snow Packs Hard in Cuts SURE is, perhaps, only one thing requiring more hardihood and effort on the part of an engineer than pushing a snow plow, and that is to haul a heavy train through snowdrifts. Occasionally such a train will stall and remain storm-bound pending the arrival of the snow plow or other assistance. The common tale is that engine cabs are fairly comfortable under such conditions. The hard and disagreeable part comes when such a train comes through and a snow flume up to the pilot comes off, striking a tree, car, derrick, and wreck and crevice.

Snow fences are used extensively. Composed of portable sections, they are placed on adjoining the more than seven hundred and considerably by blocking drifting snow.

The shrubs have been planted along the right-way, not due probably to the matured of the trees, but their growth has been retarded. If, however, they could be brought to maturity they would form an effective barrier.

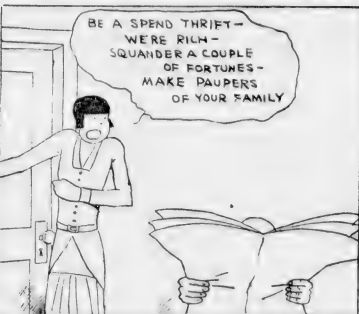

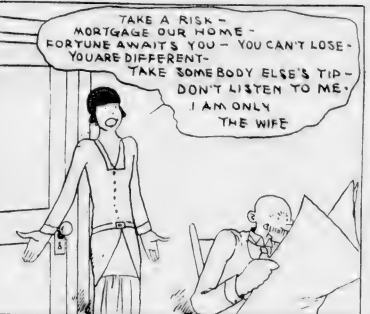

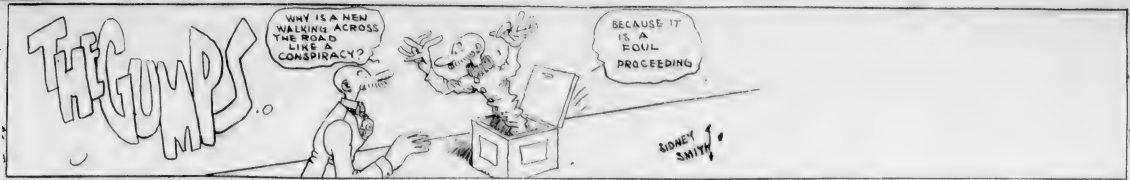

The climatic conditions should give the ground cover a good chance. The ground cover could probably be produced in the same manner as the shrubs, but it is not clear whether the shrubs are the only one that develop the trapping snow and blowing qualities. They are more commonly and the depth of snow varies according to the depth of the cut. Six, eight, ten feet or more of snow can be in the cut. The shrubs are as high as the telegraph wires.

Approaching a cut, particularly if it be a deep or deep one, an engineer based in a snow machine will send up to fifty or more feet

WE stopped again at the top of the hill and got her hot and full of water. "We hadn't hit much snow, but the idea of getting stuck all the time and the way we were going we had to hold our breath till we got to Waldemar. I had her turning a dirt road I'd seen through the trees, the only way we could get the engine to pull over against the side of a rock-strewn roadrunner."

"From Antares to Mount Forest was a call at six miles an hour. It was colder, and also more than twice as long as I wanted. Every time we hit a drift shed'd lose pounds or more and after we got there I was so tired I could hardly walk. On Christmas Day on the Teanoteau! ALCOHOL AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR GASOLINE

Chemists Make Progress For Limitless Production

By ISRAEL KLEIN

Chemists in the United States and Europe are endeavoring to make alcohol a substitute for gasoline in internal combustion engines. The process is not new, but it has been improved to such an extent that it is now possible to produce alcohol in quantities sufficient to supply the needs of the automobile industry.
The process involves the fermentation of grain, which is then distilled to produce a high-grade alcohol. This alcohol is then mixed with gasoline to form a fuel that is said to be superior to pure gasoline in many respects. It is claimed that this fuel will burn more efficiently and will produce more power than gasoline. It is also claimed that it will be less expensive than gasoline because it can be produced from cheap raw materials.

It is Better Than Gasoline

The new alcohol fuel is said to be superior to gasoline in many respects. It is claimed that it will burn more efficiently and will produce more power than gasoline.
It is also claimed that it will be less expensive than gasoline because it can be produced from cheap raw materials.

THREE 1929 CHAMPIONS TO DEFEND BADMINTON HONORS

Three out of Five Last Year's Titleholders Advance to Finals in Canadian Tournament Being Staged on Ottawa Courts

OTTAWA, Ont., March 8.—Three out of five last year's champions will defend their titles when the final rounds of the 1930 Canadian championships are run off. Jack Purcell, of Toronto, last year's singles champion, will defend his Dominion title against Noel Radford, of Vancouver, while in the ladies doubles, Mrs. J. Woodman and Miss E. George, of Vancouver, have entered the final in search of their second title.

The mixed event finds Miss Eileen George and J. J. Underhill, of Vancouver, united to defend their mixed doubles crown in the final, which is an all-Vancouver affair, against Radford and Mrs. J. Woodman. Mrs. E. F. Cope, of Vancouver, was the only one of last year's holders defending their championships who did not survive the week, falling before the steady play of Mrs. John Porteous, of Montreal, in the semi-final Friday evening. The holders of the men's doubles crown, J. G. Muir and Radford, did not defend their laurels as J. G. Muir was unable to come East.

BIG SURPRISE AT LADIES PAIR BRITAIN

Mrs. E. F. Cope and Mrs. J. J. Underhill, of Vancouver, four times holders of the ladies' doubles championship, were defeated in the quarter-final round of the championship by the hard driving O'Brien pair, Miss Ruth Robertson and Mrs. J. P. Wright, of 19-15, 15-12. The Toronto pair, whose names have been the subject of much speculation of the last decade, were defeated by the O'Brien pair in the quarter-final round of the championship. WHEAT DOWN
TWO CENTS
IN 'PEG PIT'

Weak Liverpool Cables and Bad Reports Cause
New Drop

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Mar. 8.—Lack of export demand continued to force wheat prices lower. In the face of trading on the wheat market quotations dropped 1 1/2 cents to 2 cents below yesterday's close. A sharp decline in the 'peg pit' having entered the pit and an upward march started only to be checked abruptly by heavy offerings. Final quotations were 1 1/2 cents to 1 3/4 cents lower for the day.

The May future ended the week at 110 1/2 cents, compared with yesterday's close at 111 1/2. July wheat finished at 111 1/2 to 1 1/4 and October at 112 1/2 to 1 1/4.

Weak Liverpool cables and disastrous reports from foreign countries spread a nervous feeling over the market. Reports could not only report 200,000 bushels shipped from Liverpool but also indicate any demand in sight for Canadian wheat.

Both wheat and corn grain had an inactive session. Official grain and prices practically unchanged from the previous close.

A Display of Fine Linens

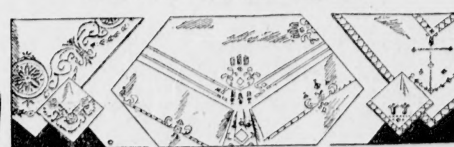

This Week, Commencing Tuesday, March 11th, Under the Direction of Mrs. Ballard

Now that Spring is practically here, the thoughts of brides are concentrating on fine linens and experienced matrons are thinking of new and original table settings for Easter entertaining. Thus, Mrs. Ballard's timely visit will be found exceedingly helpful to the women of Edmonton who are interested in fancy linens.

Mrs. Ballard will be in our linen department, commencing Tuesday, March 11th—and will demonstrate fine linens and how they should be used on well-appointed tables. She is not going to give lectures, but she will be very pleased to meet customers personally and discuss new and different table settings and give helpful advice in regard to any points they wish to bring up. We are provided with a supply of linens—dinner sets, luncheon and tea cloths, bridge sets and the like—similar to the samples Mrs. Ballard is bringing with her.

We take pleasure in sponsoring this display and feel assured you will find it both enjoyable and helpful.
